

Effective asset allocation in a single solution

The case for asset allocation

Asset allocation is a critical component of portfolio management as it can account for up to 92% of the variation in a portfolio's returns.¹

By holding investments from different asset classes, investors may be able to increase their growth potential and minimize risk over time. Since asset classes perform differently in various market conditions, having an appropriate asset allocation can go a long way in helping maintain confidence in the face of fluctuating market conditions.

Investors are becoming increasingly aware of how and why they should be using ETFs in effective asset allocation strategies.

A simple single-ticket solution

Mackenzie's all-in-one, low-cost, asset allocation ETFs are designed to address an investor's risk profile, help to mitigate impact of market volatility and deliver an appropriate investment mix with the benefit of transparent and liquid exposures.

In times of market volatility, the Mackenzie suite of Asset Allocation ETFs reduces operational complexities and administrative burdens in executing an effective allocation plan with embedded discipline.

Diversification matters

Mackenzie's Conservative, Balanced and Growth Allocation ETFs offer broad global diversification across asset classes and geographies, holding underlying Mackenzie ETFs, with strategic asset allocation. This suite provides embedded discipline and manages for operational complexity in executing an effective asset allocation strategy.

Mackenzie's Global Fixed Income Allocation ETF offers broad fixed income diversification, holding underlying Mackenzie ETFs, with strategic asset allocation. As different fixed income asset classes exhibit low to modest correlation with each other, diversification among different fixed income asset classes may reduce an investor's portfolio risk over time. Diversification by sector, geography, credit quality, duration and currency may help reduce an investor's portfolio risk over time.

Mackenzie Asset Allocation ETFs are the only asset allocation suite that provides exposure to Canadian domiciled developed ex-North America and emerging market local currency bond ETFs.
